

EAST AFRICAN AIRWAYS

A classic picture of an East African Airways DC-3 passing Mount Kilimanjaro in East Africa

East African Airways was formed on the 1st January 1946 to serve the four territories of the East African Community of the then Tanganika (now Tanzania), Kenya, Uganda and the Protectorate of Zanzibar and Pemba. The latter are two small islands in the Indian Ocean off the then Tanganika, now Tanzania.

Services started with De Havilland Dragon Rapides. There followed expansion with Lockheed Lodestars, DC-3s (the first arriving in 1949), DC4M Argonauts and subsequently De Havilland Comets, Vickers VC10s and Fokker F27s.

These flights are based on a timetable from April 1957, the same year that the Canadair DC4M Argonauts entered service. The airline was dissolved in 1977, from which the separate airlines of Kenya Airways, Air Tanzania and Uganda Airlines were created. The latter ceased operations in 2001.

The airfields used are those then in use, so for example Nairobi's (Eastleigh) is used rather than the newer international airport originally called Embakasi, now Jomo Kenyatta international (Kenya's first President). The downside is that some of these airfields whilst historically accurate, have little in the way of navigation aids or lighting! Where the airfield mentioned in the timetable is no longer in use, or not recorded in the Microsoft database, I have substituted an alternative and mentioned this in the flight plan. Please note that any reference to an NDB/VOR that is followed by an asterisk indicates that the beacon will, initially, be out of range, e.g., 'NDB WCO 355.0*'.

Often the spark that starts the research into a historic airline schedules comes from the timetables to be found of the Timetable Images web-site www.timetableimage.com of Bjorn Larsson and David Zekria, and that was true in this case. My thanks to them, and also to Malcolm McCrow and his fascinating web-site on East Africa and notably East African Airways www.mccrow.org.uk. Finally within DC-3 Airways my particular thanks to Norman Hancock (DCA 134) and Max Johnson (DCA 878) whose format I have yet again borrowed!

I hope you will find that this schedule is representative of EAA's varied routes and its DC-3/DC-4M operations and I hope you will enjoy flying them as much as I did creating them. I am sure my career in aviation was started by my early flights on Argonauts, Vikings and DC-3s to/from and within Africa! I welcome any suggestions that you think might improve this schedule and if you encounter any mistakes or anomalies please let me know and I'll correct them as soon as possible.

Note Not all of the airfields served by East African Airways in 1957 can be found today either in Microsoft Flight Simulator 2004, Google Earth or other sources! On occasions a guess has been made at the name of the current airfield. Where this is the case this is noted in the attached schedules.

EC019-01	EC019	Nairobi (Eastleigh), Kenya To Macalder (Kericho), Kenya	06:30	08:20	HKRE	HKKR	109	Departs Mondays for Mwanza Sadly Macalder is not to be found so Kericho has been substituted. Depart Rwy 24 turning onto 298° for Kericho Rwy 22. As it is a grass strip it is quite difficult to find so you may wish to consider using the Nairobi VOR NV 113.10 and flying outbound on the 298° radial. Even so you will probably be within 2-3 miles before you see it!	10000

EC037-01	EC037	Nairobi (Eastleigh), Kenya To Mwanza, Tanzania	06:20	08:15	HKRE	HTMW	247	Operates Fridays to Dar Es Salaam Early start! Depart Rwy 06 turning right onto 242° for Ngong VOR GV 115.90. It is worth knowing that the VOR sits on top of a 6765 feet high mountain! At GV turn right onto Mwanza VOR MZ 115.70* and Rwy 30 at Mwanza.	10000
EC037-02	EC037	Mwanza, Tanzania To Tabora, Tanzania	08:40	09:55	HTMW	HTTB	158	Depart Rwy 12 turning left onto 183° for Tabora NDB TB 333.0* and Rwy 13 at Tabora. Quite an impressive airfield when you get there.	7000
EC037-03	EC037	Tabora, Tanzania To Mpanda, Tanzania	10:25	11:25	HTTB	HTMP	130	Depart Rwy 13 turning right onto 235° for Rwy 27 at Mpanda. Use the NDB at Tabora TB 333.0 and a back bearing to help navigate there as it is another grass strip and quite hard to find. At the last minute you come over a ridge and the threshold of Rwy 27 is below. Enjoy!	6000

Nairobi to Entebbe via Eldoret, Kitale and Tororo

In 1957 these were operated by De Havilland Dragon Rapides or Dominies as East African Airways called them, but the airfields are capable of accepting a DC-3 so enjoy!

Uganda Internal Services - Entebbe to Soroti, Lira, Gulu, Arua and Murchison Falls

Again in 1957 these were operated by Dragon Rapides but are enjoyable flights in a DC-3! They are quite interesting in that they begin and end at Entebbe so are really circular flights! On Wednesdays they go one way around and on Saturdays the other way!

An East African Airways DC4m Argonaut at Nairobi (photograph Malcolm McCrow)

The more powerful Rolls-Royce Merlin engines of 1,760 hp, compared with DC-4's Pratt & Whitney R-2000 engines of 1450hp and pressurisation, gave the Argonaut a higher cruising speed of 282 knots versus 197 knots and a service ceiling of 36,000 feet versus 22,300 feet. It is possible to fly all these flights with the DC-3 Airways DC-4, but remember that you will be trying to get the DC-4 up to some fair old heights, so it will not be able to simply fly straight up with the autopilot set at +700 ft/min. The aircraft will stall out long before you get there! So when you see the airspeed starting to fall off, reduce the rate of climb on the auto pilot gradually down until you do get there. Please note that the rate of climb may need to be reduced as low as +200 ft/min to get to the higher altitudes. Finally the manifold pressure will fall off too, so keep the power levers stepping up until they are giving you everything and even then the manifold pressure will fall below 33". In the cruise you should be able to get the right numbers though. This was obviously the benefit of the later design of the Canadair DC-4M with its Merlin engines and pressurisation. No need to go on oxygen too!

A picture of the East African airways DC-3 referred to above following the landing accident where the propeller dug into the soft ground alongside the runway at Kilwa (photo Ken Fuller) – the strikes of the propeller against the fuselage can clearly be seen – twice against the crew door and finally into the flight deck itself.
